Background

This High Level event comes at a key moment when the world is faced with multiple crises, including biodiversity loss, climate change, pollution, food insecurity and recovering from COVID-19. Failing to deliver these ambitious decisions is simply not an option. UNGA-77 is a key milestone ahead of CBD COP15 to build upon the compelling evidence¹ and accelerate efforts, including as part of: the Decade of Action to deliver the SDGs, the UN Decade on Ecosystem Restoration, the UN Decade of Ocean Science for Sustainable Development and high level commitments made over the past years such as the 2020 UN Summit on Biodiversity, the Kunming CBD COP15.1.

This event seeks to build on previous LPN/HAC/GOA events such as the LPN event hosted in association with Stockholm +50 “Financing the transition to a Nature Positive Future”² as well as the event co-hosted by the GOA and HAC at the UN Ocean Conference, titled “Driving Positive Ocean Action: The Challenges and Opportunities of Sustainable Finance for 30by30 and Blue Economies and the recent joint statement to step up global ambition to address the interdependent crises of biodiversity loss, ecosystem degradation and climate change, on the occasion of the High-Level Meeting “Moment for Nature”³.

Despite ambitious high-level commitments including through the LPN, HAC and GOA, more is needed to translate them into key decisions for nature, including the negotiations of the post-2020 global biodiversity framework to be adopted at the CBD COP15 in Montreal under the Presidency of China.

The stakes could not be higher, and the current decade is decisive. Failure for nature will mean failure for multiple agendas from climate to security and the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development and failure to secure continuity of all life on earth. In view of the urgency, leaders' continued ambition and resolve to accelerate efforts is key to success.

Types of significant announcements and actions to be showcased

Event organizers are seeking in particular significant and action-oriented announcements and actions in the areas of domestic financing, international financing and private/blended and innovative financing, including blue finance, in line with equitably transitioning to a nature-positive economy and world, as well as progress on delivering past commitments. These will need to directly demonstrate how they will support the implementation of an ambitious and transformational global biodiversity framework.
